WORKSHOP

on

Research Methodology

27, 28 & 29, April, 2023

Organised by:

Department of Political Science
Department of Botany
M.L.K.(P.G.) College, Balrampur (U.P.)

About the Workshop

The main theme of the present workshop is to educate the students about research and other related topics especially plagiarisms. Research methodology has been defined as “the process of designing, conducting and analyzing a research study” (Kohn & Schooler, 1984). It is the study of research methods, concepts and practices. Research methods are used to collect data on research questions which can then be analyzed. Students should know about the research methods as well as the writing skills because these are essential for writing manuscript and research communication. The research methodology is also including experimental designing which is a way to design an experiment by predicting what will happen when one does certain things or get specific results from sample population (people). This helps to understand better about the types of research so that one can make better decisions based on their finding. Experimental design is used in many different fields and disciplines, from neuroscience to psychology, economics and political science.

A dissertation or thesis is likely to be the longest and most difficult piece of work a student has ever completed. It can, however, also be a very rewarding piece of work since, unlike essays and other assignments, the student is able to pick a topic of special interest and work on their own initiative. Writing a dissertation requires a range of planning and research skills that will be of great value for the student future career and within organizations. The dissertation topic and question should be sufficiently focused that students can collect all the necessary data within a relatively short time-frame, usually about six weeks for postgraduate program.

Most of the students are not familiar with the research methodology and don't know the writing skill that may be great concerns because in the New Education Policy 2020, research work is allotted to the students from the beginning specially in postgraduation program. Therefore, there is a strong need to educate our students with this aspect and not only theoretical but also the practical knowledge should be provided through conducting such types of workshops.

The main objectives of the present workshop are:

- Data collection and data analysis.
- Writing skills for synopsis, dissertation, thesis and research paper.
- Plagiarism and plagiarized contents.
- Project proposal preparation.
